84 LOCAL TRANSPORT PLAN 4

Andrew Renaut, Head of Transport Policy & Planning, B&HCC (AR)

AR: It has been a statutory requirement to have Local Transport Plan (LTP) since 2000. The initial process was very prescriptive but over the years more was left to the discretion of the local authority. The LTP was closely linked to the city and to the council's priorities. It was also a source of capital funding.

The geographic scope for the LTP4 was vast: the city was an international visitor destination; there was the Coast to Capital LEP in the region; the evolving sub-region has the Greater Brighton City Region; and the Brighton and Lewes Biosphere and the National Park. Locally the scope covers the city itself, the seafront, and the Wards and streets.

LTP4 had two elements: a long term strategy looking to 2030 with goals and objectives; and a 4 year delivery plan with actions and measures. Progress will be reviewed in 2018.

The primary transport challenges were: tackling congestion; managing pollution; improving road safety; maintaining the infrastructure; enhance the public realm; increasing transport choices; changing behaviour.

The transport system had to cope with seasonal changes in the city's population. Many plans and strategies were used to develop LTP4 such as the National Highways and Transport Survey; the new Visitors Survey 2014 and many more. There were also a number of stakeholder workshops. LTP4 was endorsed by the Transport and Sustainability Committee and agreed by Full Council in March 2015.

Q: How were ideas put into the plan reflected? Can we see what happened to our input? What about concessionary train travel for older people?

AR: issues raised would have been considered although details on how each set of individual concerns were addressed was not in this presentation. The train companies were not under the direction of the council.

LTP4 had a number of citywide goals: grow the economy; reduce carbon emissions; increase safety and security; provide equality, mobility and accessibility; improve health and wellbeing; enhance the public realm; encourage respect and responsibility. For example, in the goal to change behaviour (encouraging respect and responsibility) there was a Travel Plan for council's employees, including interest free loans for an annual bus pass.

Q: the new scheme that involves using the phone for parking was difficult for some older people. What was happening?

AR: there was a dialogue going on looking at different ways of doing things. They were using technology to be more efficient but this was not always available to all and that needed to be taken into account.

Q: what can be done to influence bus charges?

AR: We can relay information and concerns but can only encourage companies rather than mandate behaviour. The bus companies were open to discussions and looking at changing the ways services run from east to west across the city.

Q: did you consider the level crossing at Boundary Road?

AR: this was closely studied as part of the regeneration of Shoreham Harbour but it was very difficult to engineer away the level crossing and wouldn't be cost effective.

AR: The overall approach was to maintain the existing infrastructure, manage transport differently, and improve – investment to improve.

Feasibility and research included looking at coaches and the issues around Pool Valley; the freight strategy; interchanges including train stations, taxi ranks and bus stops; the information strategy and how to ensure feedback in information in real time; and transport corridors and routes.

They were also looking at centres of activity such as shopping. The Air quality management plan links very clearly with shopping areas. This was an example of looking at more than one area at a time.

The Chair thanked Andy Renaut for a most interesting and informative session. The Chair also thanked Andy Renaut for his offer to come to a future meeting and suggested that it would be most welcome after the OPC elections.

85 TRUST FOR THE DEVELOPING COMMUNITIES

Steven Andrews, Community Participation Worker, Trust for the Developing Communities (TDC).

Steve Andrews (SA) – Steve had been working with TDC since 2006 providing and delivering community development work – that is, asking people what they want in their neighbourhood. He worked in New Larchwood in Coldean getting residents to interact with others and then with other communities. He now also provided outreach in Hove, Portslade, Hollingdean and Hollingbury. A key objective was easing social isolation in older people and investigating groups to see how to link. Many groups were unaware of others and he was making connections with the Fed, LGBT Switchboard, Impact Initiatives and the Hangleton and Knoll project.

The University of Brighton send volunteers to do work placements at New Larchwood. The remit from Adult Social Care was to help 50+ engage with older people and actually there are more 20+.

Other work included support for bids for funding – eg the successful bid for the Healthy Neighbourhood Fund, a lunch club in Hollingbury that is underway. There was a steering advisory group that were coaxing opinions out of those who haven't had a voice before. In December 2014 Adult Social Care asked for the steering group to be set up but now there was two; North and Central and West Hove and Portslade. The groups meet quarterly and the last meeting was in The Hive in Stoneham Park but they were going to rotate venues.

Another initiative was 'Men in Sheds' aimed at older men to encourage them to talk together. This hasn't had many takers so they are looking at being destination or task focused meetings.

Steve is funded until 2017.

Q: was there data on where the isolated people were?

SA: only the Insight figures from the council. It was a long process and they needed to get people to events to see what they wanted to do.

Q: how do you work with the AFC? Where do the views you collect go?

SA: aware of the AFC. A list was being drawn up to email around to the steering group and others.

Chair: Many thanks for a most interesting session. In the future, the OPC could have a role in collating all the voices and providing the conduit.
